Neuzil Selected As Top Young Area Leader

(IOWA CITY IA) Terrence Neuzil, member of the Johnson County Board of Supervisors, was recently selected as one of the top young leaders in the area by the Corridor Business Journal. This is the first time the Journal, which is an independent business weekly publication for the Cedar Rapids – Iowa City Corridor, established a list of young leaders. The publication recognized the 35 year-old Neuzil because he has “embraced his role as a member of the Johnson County Board of Supervisors and has established himself as a point person for the area’s future”. The Journal also pointed out that Neuzil worked with the Board in the creation of a strategic plan that has “assisted in the county’s growth, communication and budget needs.” The Journal also acknowledged Neuzil for teaming up with Linn County Supervisor Lu Barron in the creation of the Johnson-Linn County Leadership Summit which has “allowed government officials to join forces and work on projects within the Corridor.” Neuzil and State Senator and Iowa Republican Chairman Chuck Larson Jr. were the only two elected officials selected in the distinguished list.
